Adam Setzer is a litigator who focuses on representing corporate clients in business and commercial disputes. He has represented Fortune 500 companies and a range of other clients in state and federal courts. He has experience with large, complex cases, including those involving product liability and mass torts. He is skilled at working through technical scientific and medical issues and explaining their bottom-line significance in a case.

Prior to joining Parker Poe, Adam worked for one of the 50 largest law firms in the country. He earned his law degree from Wake Forest, where he was a member of the Wake Forest Law Review's editorial staff and served on the executive council for the moot court. He received his undergraduate degree from UNC-Chapel Hill.
